Women in eDiscovery Leadership to Speak at Relativity Fest

MINNEAPOLIS – SEPTEMBER 16, 2020 – Women in eDiscovery, a 501(c)(6) nonprofit organization that brings together women interested in technology related to the legal profession, announces their executive directors will be speaking at a session during Relativity Fest, a virtual three-day conference taking place September 21-23, 2020.

The “The Stellar Women in e-Discovery” session is coming to you virtually this year at Relativity Fest. Hosts Mila Taylor and Mary Rechteris will sit down with Beth Finkle and Jackie Rosborough, executive directors of Women in eDiscovery, on September 21 at 2:00 p.m. CDT for an interactive talk centered on questions from attendees. If you are interested in submitting questions ahead of time, email them to marketing@relativity.com.

The Stellar Women in e-Discovery is brought to you by Relativity. The talk is one of more than 100 sessions at this year’s virtual Relativity Fest. Stellar Women shines a light on female leaders making their mark in legal tech by elevating the careers of others and paying it forward. The Stellar Women in e-Discovery podcast can be found on Spotify, Apple Podcasts and Simplecast.

“We look forward to speaking at this event and bringing education and networking to the industry during these unprecedented times,” states Rosborough. “Even though we can’t all be together in person, having the opportunity to bring learning and insight to what we are seeing for the future of our industry is important. Beth and I look forward to joining top experts in our space and sharing our knowledge with the attendees.”

Relativity Fest is a three-day virtual conference offering a community of e-discovery, compliance and tech professionals working together to transform discovery. For more information about the event, visit <https://relativityfest.com/>.
